Birkman Basics

In our journey along our career path, we have three distinct types of relationships – with self, others, and organizations. Because of the common denominator role of self in these relationships, self-awareness is essential and foundational in almost every aspect in our professional and personal life. This program is designed to give each of us an authentic look at ourselves, how we relate to others who may be different from ourselves, and how we adapt to organizations we join.

It will teach you how to better deal with the diverse membership of chapters, get the most out of your fellow members, and best function within a business community.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 12

8:00-9:00 a.m.

Breakfast and Networking

Full breakfast buffet. Network with Board, other volunteers, Central Office Staff and your chapter officer peers.

Building Successful Teams (Small Group)

Building a successful and productive team - Assembling, Developing, Maintaining and Performing - has always been the duty and challenge of a formal leader. There are two tracks of team development – the tasking of the job functions and the relationships in the team dynamics.

This session will explore the Assembling process based on providing a diversity of behaviors.

Successful Organizations – A Guiding Star

Organizations by nature are always in a state of flux due to their fluid environment, both internal and external. Successful organizations have stabilizing points or guides to provide structure and support for the organizational beliefs.

- Organizational Focus (Purpose)
- Organizational Culture (Principles)
- Organizational Function (Performance)

This session will explore how knowledge of and adherence to a guiding star will assist you in both leading your chapter and your career.

10:45-11:15 a.m.

Incentivizing, Motivating & Accountability

Moving team members forward requires insights on how to initiate, institutionalize, and sustain positive behaviors. Motivating and incentivizing individuals is not a one-size-fits-all operation. To be effective, you need to recognize the differences between people and tailor incentives in order to properly motivate.

Unless you're in the Army, accountability isn't as simple as telling people what to do. We will explore methods to build a culture of accountability within your chapter and how this relates to professional environments.

Navigating Difficult Conversations

As we mobilize our teams forward with shared models, there are times when unclear and conflicting strategies produce relationship dysfunctions. Having that crucial conversation during difficult situations always seems to be troublesome. We may sometimes tend to become argumentative, emotional, passively aggressive, or just avoid getting to the heart of the matter. Why do we have such difficulties? This interactive workshop is designed to provide insights to help you navigate through challenging conflict moments in your associations.

In fact, some would argue that in the absence of a plan, a leader isn't leading at all. In order to lead, you need to have a destination in mind. In this session, we will discuss the goal setting process and how it can be used to not only provide direction and focus to your chapter, but also aid in accountability and motivation in all aspects of your life.

7:45-9:00 p.m.	Leading Like a Facilitator Facilitation is the process of designing and running a successful meeting in business, organizational development, and in consensus decision-making. It is any activity that makes an action or a process easy or easier. In this session you will learn how to approach leadership more from the mindset of a facilitator and less as a top-down, formal leader. These skills will aid in both leading your chapter, a project team in school, and in business.
