Delta Sigma Pi – Board of Directors

Dear Board of Directors,

It is my honor to write in support of the Vanderbilt colony and request that their petition for a chapter charter be approved. I have been District Director for the colony since they began and have seen firsthand the dedication to the organization and excitement for becoming a chapter of Delta Sigma Pi that each member of the colony has.

Though the colony go off to a slow start the original 8 members worked tirelessly to recruit quality members into the colony and had a plan to complete each of the requirements for installation within the academic year. I watched as they worked as a team to plan events, build and incorporate committees so that each member in equally involved, and learn how to operate their colony according to our bylaws and policies and procedures.

The level of interest shown by students on the Vanderbilt campus has proven that the campus has more than enough students interested in joining to ensure appropriate growth of the chapter going forward. Each member of the petitioning group has shown a dedication to the organization and excitement to become brothers of the Fraternity.

It has been a pleasure to work with this group of students and I believe this colony has what it takes to be a Chapter of Excellence. I look forward welcoming them into our brotherhood and continuing to work with them as their chapter grows.

Fraternally,

Kimberly Loudon

Dear Board of Directors,

I have been the District Director for the Vanderbilt Colony since 2017. Since that time, I have had a chance to witness the hard work and dedication demonstrated by the members of the Vanderbilt Colony. Therefore, it is with great pleasure that I express my support for the Vanderbilt Colony and their petition for a chapter charter to be approved.

Although small in the beginning, it was very clear that the colony had a clear path and goals that they wanted to accomplish. They worked tirelessly to recruit members and found many quality candidates that incorporated the Delta Sigma Pi values we strive to keep as a fraternity. I am very impressed every time I attend an executive meeting or regular chapter meeting at the level of attendance and commitment shown by the members. The colony makes sure that all members are involved in some capacity and all ideas are heard.

As their confidence continues to build each semester, they continue to expand their knowledge of the fraternity and continuously ask questions. I love that they are so curious, and it really shows me that not only does this chapter have a bright future, but the members are going to be successful business professionals as well.

I have truly enjoyed and am privileged to work with the Vanderbilt Colony. I cannot wait to continue watching them grow into a successful chapter and future brothers of Delta Sigma Pi.

Fraternally,

Vanessa Leithoff

Dear Board of Directors,

It is a pleasure to write to you in support of the Vanderbilt colony and to request that the petition for a chapter charter be approved. I have served as the Faculty Advisor since the inception and have enjoyed the opportunity to support the students as they have launched Delta Sigma Pi at Vanderbilt University.

As you have no doubt learned from the petition and your other communication with the leadership team, the colony has successfully appointed leaders, formed the necessary committees, and learned how to operate according to the bylaws, policies, and procedures of Delta Sigma Pi.

Due to the interest shown by Vanderbilt undergraduates and the dedication of the members, recruiting efforts have been remarkably effective and turnout for meetings and other events has been excellent.

I look forward to working with the members to support their efforts as they take their next important steps.

Thank you in advance for carefully considering the petition.

Sincerely,

Dear Board of Directors,

I am writing to enthusiastically support the Vanderbilt Delta Sigma Pi colony's petition to become a chapter. My support stems from (i) our students' strong desire to create this chapter (ii) the benefit it will provide them as they build their careers and also the positive externalities that this will create on campus.

The colony has had strong leadership with students like Anna Maynard, who I first met when she, along with a few other students, was organizing to start the Delta Sigma Pi colony on campus. I have also recently met with Alex Nickels. These students have worked tirelessly through the year to get the colony started, and to increase membership, organize professional, recruitment, and community service events. They have now built a significant membership level of young women and men that is ethnically and geographically diverse.

Economics is the largest major at Vanderbilt followed by Human Organization and Development. 292 students graduated with an economics major in the academic year 2017-2018. At Vanderbilt, while there are opportunities for students to connect with each other and develop skills that will help them in the personal and professional lives, these opportunities are limited relative to the demand. A Delta Sigma Pi chapter will play an important role in our student's lives, as it will help them connect with the business world, increase their involvement with the community, and build leadership and other professional skills.

Vanderbilt students value what a Delta Sigma Pi membership has to offer I expect the chapter to be successful on campus and benefit the Vanderbilt community. I support their petition to become a chapter wholeheartedly.

Sincerely,

Dear Board of Directors,

It is with great honor that I endorse the Vanderbilt Colony at Vanderbilt University in Nashville, Tennessee in their endeavor to become a chapter of Delta Sigma Pi. I encourage you to approve their petition and grant them a chapter charter so they can officially bring the Omicron chapter back to their university. Every member of the colony that I have had the opportunity to interact with, I truly believe, would be a great asset to our fraternity.

For the past year the colony members have been very focused on their goal to become a chapter. They have been very diligent in their pursuit, executing plans, verifying that they are meeting all of the necessary requirements, and they continue to ask questions about ways they can improve both what they are doing now, and for the future. This was evident as they began submitting their strategic plans for the Fall semester; I was very impressed by their ambitious goals and innovative ideas. I have great confidence that they will follow through and continue to strive higher in the semesters to come.

The goals, aspirations, and support this group has will carry them through as they work to achieve excellence in their fraternal, educational, and personal lives. With numerous alumni ready to assist, I believe this young chapter will succeed. I have full confidence the Vanderbilt colony will become a shining example of what it means to be a Chapter of Excellence and I look forward to working with them in the future as the Omicron chapter at Vanderbilt University.

Department Information

Economics Department

Overview: The Department of Economics offers the largest undergraduate major in the College of Arts and Science, providing rigorous training in micro and macroeconomics and a variety of advanced elective courses. About 250 students complete the economics major each year. Since its inception in 1956, students from over 120 countries have studied in the program, many of whom have gone on to distinguished careers in public service and international organizations.

Options: Economics Major, Econ & History Major, Economics Minor

Vision: “Students choose to major in economics for two strong reasons. They want deeper understanding of economic phenomena and they enjoy the rigorous reasoning. A weak reason for majoring in economics is for the sake of career. Career prospects are brighter with academic success. Success is more likely when a student chooses a major where the subject matter is interesting and the required skills match a student's abilities. Choice of undergraduate major has only a modest association with ultimate career.

A majority of Vanderbilt's economics majors enter professional schools within a few years of graduation. About two-thirds expect MBAs, and about a fifth expect law degrees. Other students find employment in a wide variety of industries. Some also go to medical and dental schools, to graduate study in public policy, religion, and other fields as well as graduate study in economics. Success in the economics major is good preparation for a variety of careers.

Studying economics will develop habits of careful thought, the application of mathematics, and practice in clear writing. Economists engage the world of current affairs. Studying economics includes learning to use statistics and to read critically. Economics majors are interesting people both because of their skills and because they can explain why economic phenomena occur and how economic performance might improve.”

Faculty: Our faculty is diverse and respected internationally, with research interests covering most of the major areas of modern economics. Faculty members are editors of major academic journals, active in professional organizations and societies, the recipients of grant funding, and published in the upper echelon of journals. They are committed to delivering outstanding undergraduate and graduate education, and to producing high-quality research.

National Rankings/Acclaim: Ranked 18 out of 431 Economics programs nationwide (College Factual)

Human and Organizational Development

Purpose: The Human and Organizational Development (HOD) major is designed to prepare you for a successful career focused on finding solutions to human problems in organizations and communities. The HOD philosophy emphasizes the importance of connecting academic knowledge and theories to personal and professional practice.

HOD undergraduate core requirements offer an applied liberal arts education that will endow you with the skills and knowledge you need to succeed in a people-oriented organizational role. These skills include:

- effective written and oral presentation
- data-driven decision analysis
- proficiency in using technology toward the goal of aiding organizations
- interpersonal communication and collaborative work behaviors
- group leadership, organizational development, management, and training

Once core requirements are completed, students declare on of five tracks:

- Community Leadership and Development
- Health and Human Services
- International Leadership and Development
- Leadership and Organizational Effectiveness
- Education Policy

- HOD Capstone Internship
 - The culminating event in the HOD students' undergraduate experience. The purpose of the HOD Capstone internship is academic and this makes it different from the typical vocational internship. The credit earned is for the coursework that accompanies the internship experience. The internship coursework design allows students an opportunity to apply and strengthen the core competencies of the HOD degree in an organizational setting. It is the ultimate test of whether students can use what they have learned at Vanderbilt on the job and in everyday life.

The Business Minor

Vision: Launched in the fall of 2017, the Undergraduate Business Minor is an opportunity for students to pursue a program that is “Uniquely Vanderbilt.” This trans-institutional program, with elective course options from each of the four undergraduate schools and fundamentals courses taught by the Owen Graduate School of Management, is designed to complement the strong liberal arts education.

- ❑ Fundamental Courses (Owen Graduate School)
 - ❑ Organizational Behavior, Essentials of Financial Reporting, Principles of Marketing, Principles of Finance, Managing Operations
- ❑ Electives
 - ❑ Business Pathways
 - ❑ Entrepreneurship
 - ❑ Ethics
 - ❑ Finance and Accounting
 - ❑ Marketing and Advertising
 - ❑ Operations
 - ❑ Organizational Effectiveness
 - ❑ Strategy

Public Policy

The Public Policy Studies (PPS) major at Vanderbilt is interdisciplinary, bringing together tools of policy analysis such as political science, economics, sociology, anthropology, philosophy, statistics, and public finance. The result is a degree that provides a broad understanding of the forces that shape public policy. Graduates are prepared to go on to careers in politics, law, business, community activism, journalism, etc.

The major is designed to achieve four main goals:

- To provide students with a set of analytical skills useful in policy analysis, including statistics, economics, and research methods.
- To give students a general background on the policy environment in the U.S. through courses in political science and other social sciences and through requiring a course on ethics.
- To encourage students to begin to develop expertise in one area of policy through requiring four courses in that area (the policy track).
- To provide students an opportunity to pull together all this knowledge in the production of a significant research paper on a topic related to their policy track.

The public policy studies major is rigorous; it requires 39 credit hours, including a number of quantitative and economics courses. But students who major in public policy have both the skill set and general background that employers and graduate schools want. Recent graduates have been accepted into top law schools (Georgetown) and graduate schools (the JFK School of Government at Harvard) and have also gone directly to work at exciting jobs in politics and finance (Goldman Sachs).

The Vanderbilt Colony of Delta Sigma Pi

The Vanderbilt Colony of Delta Sigma Pi began with the interest of Anna Maynard to create an option for business students who wanted a business organization catered to their needs. Students wanted to be a part of a professional, business fraternity and still be able to balance all of their other activities and studies along with it. After contacting Dale Clark in August of 2017 and seeking help from other students on campus, the Vanderbilt Colony worked through many hurdles to get approved by Vanderbilt University as an organization. Once approval was received, interest around campus and membership grew rapidly. The colony attended and/or hosted the following events:

Professional Event #1: - November 10th: Uber Elevate: Two former Vanderbilt students, Nikhil Goel and Wyatt Smith, who are now working for Uber, came to speak with us about their experience at Vanderbilt, their career experience afterwards, how they ended up at Uber, and mostly what they are doing for Uber. They are working on a project called Uber Elevate which plans in the next 5-10 years to bring uber to the sky, offering air transportation to and from the airport to landing docks in major cities. Goel and Smith spoke on this for about 45 minutes and left 15 minutes at the end for questions from the audience.

All of the registered members of Delta Sigma Pi were in attendance. It was an open invitation however, advertised as sponsored by Delta Sigma Pi, so there were roughly 100 other students from the Human & Organizational Development, Economics, and Engineering majors.

Professional Event #2: January 17th: Speaker. Marissa Caporella, a graduating Vanderbilt student who spent time working as a mentor at the Vanderbilt Career Center's Finance Career Mentorship Program came to speak with our colony. The first 20 minutes of the session were dedicated to resumé building as Ms. Caporella has extensive experience mentoring students and reviewing resumé's. She walked us through what a strong business resumé should look like, from the big picture down to the nitty gritty details. The next 20 minutes were dedicated to her experience as a college student, her internship and interview process, her internship with Wells Fargo, and her future career search. She went in depth into why she enjoyed what she did, how the interviewing process went and what to expect -- focusing especially on finance and banking, as well as what she learned and worked on during her internship. Finally, we had a long Q&A section to close out the event, with questions varying from personal scenarios to general questions about her experience and what we can do to best prepare ourselves for the next few years of our lives.

Professional Event #3: February 7th: Consulting Panel. Three Vanderbilt alumni came to speak to our chapter about their experience and paths in consulting. All three participated in Vanderbilt's Accelerator program, a summer business program, and then went on to get jobs with Accenture. For the first 30 minutes, they spoke about their experiences that led them to be interested in consulting, their recruiting and interviewing processes, and then finally their internships with major consulting firms. The last 30 minutes was open for questions from the colony, which they answered very thoroughly and concretely. All in all, it was a very helpful and straight forward glimpse into a major field that Vanderbilt business students tend to go into.

Professional Event #4: March 9: Speaker. A Vanderbilt Alumnus, Danielle Kitchen, who is traveling the world and working for a consulting firm came to speak with our chapter. As a student, she had been an intern at Google, and has the goal of working in public policy in Washington. She told us her story, why she decided to work at Google and go into consulting with such different ambitions in mind. She also spent a significant amount of time talking about the recruiting process for major tech companies, what kinds of things you can do working at Google, and some really good tips for how to make your internship stand out, for example, taking the initiative to work on your own projects -- she talked about putting together a large philanthropic pet show at Google at the end of her summer.

Professional Event #5: March 21: Speaker. Professor Michael Burcham who is a Lecturer of Entrepreneurship at Vanderbilt's Owen School of Management came to speak to our chapter about his experiences including working for the HCA, working on a political campaign, starting multiple healthcare technology companies, and starting the Nashville Center for Entrepreneurship. We spent the first 30 minutes of the event listening to him speak about his experiences and the last 30 minutes having a Q/A session. During the Q/A section, questions were mostly focused on entrepreneurship and the industry of healthcare.

Professional Event #6: March 26: Career Center Workshop. We hosted the career center to help us brainstorm new ideas and begin to plan our future as an organization on campus. We spent the first half of the workshop talking about ideas for partnership between the career center and DSP as well as catching them up on our story and our progress thus far. During the second half, we did an activity suggested by the career center which included laying out what we want to gain from DSP, why it is beneficial to us and campus, and new opportunities for growth including expanding our committee roles, creating traditions, annual events, and campus wide events, and pursuing corporate sponsorships. We left it off with the beginning of a strategic plan and a plan to reconnect and continue working with the career center.

Professional Event #7: April 4th: Interview Workshop. As a colony, we participated in a peer-to-peer interviewing workshop. There was a short presentation at the beginning of the event and all members were asked to come prepared with answers to common interviewing questions. The purpose of this event was to give everyone in the chapter individualized feedback on how they interview and what they could do better to produce the best results in a real interview. The interview workshop consisted of 30 pairs of desks set up. One person in each pair was instructed to answer the interview question asked by the facilitator while their partner took notes and gave feedback. After two minutes, the partners would switch roles. After each round, one of the pairs would move to the next table so that each round everyone is getting feedback from a new person. There were 10 rounds and everyone was given feedback on their answers to 10 questions. At the end we had a short discussion on any remaining questions, comments or advice people had regarding interviewing.

Professional Event #8: April 18th: Speaker. Randy Eller, a consultant who started and runs Eller Enterprises, specializing in the retail gift industry, came to speak with us about his experiences in business. He gave us a brief history of his life, growing up in Gatlinburg made him very interested in the industry because it is a very touristy area. Then he went on to his first enterprises and the companies he grew and finally how he sold his final retail company and started Eller Enterprises to help others in this industry. He left about 20 minutes at the end for questions. The main themes over all were (1) you don't have to work for a huge well-known company like Bane, Google, Wells Fargo, etc. to be successful and (2) you should always take risks.

Community Service Event #1: December 6th: Holiday Cards. The entire colony wrote thoughtful holiday cards for the Vanderbilt University Children's Hospital. The cards were delivered to the patients as the holiday season came into full swing.

Community Service Event #2: January 10th: Operation Gratitude. Colony members wrote letters to both deployed soldiers and newly recruited soldiers. The letters were mailed to California where they will be distributed to members of the US Military.

Community Service Event #3: February 7th: Co Sponsor Ronald McDonald Interest Meeting. Colony formulates partnership with local Ronald McDonald club on Vanderbilt's campus to promote volunteering across campus. This meeting represents the first step in a long term partnership with this organization, and encourages both colony members and general Vanderbilt students to get involved to make a difference.

Community Service Event #4: February 23: Pop Tab donation at the 2018 LEAD Conference in Charlotte. Every member of the colony helped contribute pop tabs for the fraternity wide national drive.

Community Service Event #5: April 7th: National MS Society at Nissan Stadium in Downtown Nashville. Colony members coordinated with the Western Kentucky University chapter to volunteer for three hours and begin a long-term partnership with another chapter.

Community Service Event #6: April 16th: Ronald McDonald House. Colony members purchased and cooked dinner for families staying at the local house in Nashville.

Fundraising Event #1: Chipotle Fundraiser: 5-9 PM on 21st Avenue, for every meal bought 50% of the proceeds benefit Delta Sigma Pi

Fundraising Event #2: April 21: Pizza Fundraiser. We had volunteers from our colony sell pizza in groups of three for hour intervals during the Rites of Spring concert and tailgates. The event was actively marketed with all proceeds benefiting the colony.
