THE UNIVERSITY OF MARYLAND

The University of Maryland, in addition to being a State University, is the "Land-Grant" institution of Maryland. The University is co-educational in all of its branches.

College Park

The undergraduate colleges and the Graduate School of the University of Maryland are located at College Park, Prince George's County, Maryland, on a beautiful tract of rolling, wooded land, less than eight miles from the heart of the Nation's capital, Washington, D. C. This nearness to Washington, naturally, is of immeasurable advantage to students because of the unusual library facilities afforded by the Library of Congress and the libraries of Government Departments; the privilege of observing at close range sessions of the United States Supreme Court, the United States Senate and the House of Representatives; the opportunity of obtaining almost without effort an abundance of factual data which is constantly being assembled by the numerous agencies of the Federal Government.

The University is served by excellent transportation facilities, including the main line of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, by the Washington street car system, and by several bus lines. The campus fronts on the Baltimore-Washington Boulevard, a section of U. S. Route No. 1, which makes the University easily accessible by private automobile travel.

College Park, and the adjacent Calvert Hills and College Heights, constitute a group of fine residential communities close to the University campus, where are located the homes of many of the members of the faculty and staff, and where students who prefer to live off campus may find desirable living accommodations at reasonable rates.

Baltimore

The professional schools of the University--Dentistry, Law, Medicine, Nursing, and Pharmacy--the University Hospital, and the Baltimore Program of the College of Special and Continuation Studies are located in a group of splendid buildings, most of them erected in recent years, at or near the adjacent corners of Lombard and Greene Streets and Lombard and Redwood Streets, Baltimore, Maryland.

Baltimore, a thriving, modern industrial city of more than a million inhabitants, has an old established culture represented by outstanding educational institutions, libraries, museums, parks, public buildings, and places of historical interest.

A BRIEF HISTORY OF THE UNIVERSITY

The history of the University of Maryland dates back to 1807 when the first school of the University, the College of Medicine, was founded in Baltimore. In the more than 140 years since its founding, the University has expanded both physically and in its standards of education, until it now occupies a position as one of the leading universities in the country.

The history of the present University is the history of two institutions; the old privately-owned and operated University of Maryland in Baltimore and the Maryland State College (formerly Maryland Agricultural College) at College Park. These institutions were merged in 1920.

In 1807 the College of Medicine of Maryland was organized, the fifth medical school in the United States. A permanent home was established in 1814-1815 in Baltimore, the oldest structure in America devoted to medical teaching. Here was founded one of the first medical libraries (and the first medical school library) in the United States. In 1812 the General Assembly of Maryland authorized the College of Medicine of Maryland to "annex or constitute faculties of divinity, law, and arts and sciences," and by the same act declared that the "colleges or faculties thus united should be constituted an university by the name and under the title of the University of Maryland." By authority of this act, steps were taken in 1813 to establish "a faculty of law," and in 1823 a regular school of instruction in law was opened.

Subsequently there were added: in 1882 a Department of Dentistry which was absorbed in 1923 by the Baltimore College of Dental Surgery (founded in 1840, the first dental school in the world); in 1889 a School of Nursing; and in 1904 the Maryland College of Pharmacy (founded in 1841, the third oldest pharmacy college in the United States).

The Maryland State College was chartered in 1856 under the name of the Maryland Agricultural College, the second agricultural college in the Western Hemisphere. For three years the College was under private management. In 1862 the Congress of the United States passed the Land Grant Act. This act granted each State and Territory that should claim its benefits a proportionate amount of unclaimed western lands, in place of scrip, the proceeds from the sale of which should apply under certain conditions to the "endowment, support, and maintenance of at least one college where the leading object shall be, without excluding other scientific and classical studies, and including military tactics, to teach such branches of learning as are related to agriculture and the mechanic arts, in such a manner as the Legislatures of the States may respectively prescribe, in order to promote the liberal and practical education of the industrial classes in the several pursuits and professions of life." This grant was accepted by the General Assembly of Maryland, and the Maryland Agricultural College was named as the beneficiary of the grant. Thus the College became, at least in part, a State institution. In the fall of 1914 control was taken over entirely by the State. In 1916 the the General Assembly granted a new charter to the College, and made it the Maryland State College.

In 1920, by an act of the State Legislature, the University of Maryland was merged with the Maryland State College, and the resultant institution was given the name, University of Maryland.

The College of Business and Public Administration offers training designed to prepare students for service in business firms, governmental agencies, cooperative enterprises, labor unions, small business units and other organizations requiring effective training in administrative skills and techniques, and for the teaching of business subjects, economics, geography, and government and politics in high schools and colleges.

It supplies scientific administrative training to students and prospective executives on a professional basis comparable to university training in the other professional fields. Administration is regarded as a profession, and the College of Business and Public Administration prepares its students for this profession by offering courses of instruction which present general principles and techniques of management and administration and brings together in systematic form the experiences and practices of business firms and governmental units. This plan of education does not displace practical experience, but supplements and strengthens it by shortening the period of apprenticeship otherwise necessary, and by giving a broad and practical knowledge of the major principles, policies, and methods of administration.

During the first half of the college study programs the student secures a broad foundation upon which to base the professional and the more technical courses offered in the last half of the course. The managerial and operating points of views are stressed in the advanced courses in production, marketing, labor, finance, real estate, insurance, accounting, secretarial training and public administration. The purpose of the training offered is to aid the student as a prospective executive in developing his ability to identify and to solve administrative and managerial problems; and to adjust himself and his organization, policies, and practices to changing social, political and economic situations.

The aim of the college is to present and illustrate such sound principles of management as are applicable to both big business and small business. Large-scale business, because of its possible economies, will be expanded in some industries under certain well-known conditions. There are, on the other hand, industries and many situations which still call for the small business. If these small-scale businesses are to be operated with profit to the owners and with satisfactory and economical service to the public, it is imperative that authentic principles of administration be applied to them. Sound principles of ethical conduct are emphasized at all times throughout the various courses.

The primary aim of collegiate education for government and business service is to train for effective management. The College of Business and Public Administration, University of Maryland, was established to supply effective training in administration to the young men and women whose task will be the guiding of the more complex business enterprises and governmental units resulting from industrial, social and political development and expansion.

THE PROFESSIONAL BUSINESS CLUB

The Professional Business Club is the culmination of a long-time dream and ambition of the Delta Sigma Pi Alumni Club in Baltimore. For many years they have looked upon the University of Maryland as an institution in which to colonize a new chapter of the Fraternity, but a succession of events over the years prevented any action being taken. Finally, in November of 1949 a delegation from the Baltimore Alumni Club of Delta Sigma Pi met and spoke to a small group of students at the University about the Fraternity - its organization, aims and ideals. At this meeting the spark of interest was kindled. Two weeks later those students met together and, with the assistance and cooperation of Dr. John H. Frederick and Mr. Charles A. Taff, founded an organization, which took the name of the Professional Business Club. This group took as its aims the fostering and promoting within its membership the principles and ideals of scholarship and business ethics long supported by Delta Sigma Pi. At this first meeting the officers elected were: Robert A. Wettling, President; Wayne O. Brubaker, Vice-President; and Robert W. Hammond, Secretary-Treasurer.

One of the first official acts of the Professional Business Club was to signify its desire to become a chapter of Delta Sigma Pi, and a letter of intent to petition that body for membership was dispatched on December 7, 1949.

Since its founding, the Club has grown steadily in strength and vigor over the months of its existence.

The original group of twenty members has doubled in size and is still growing rapidly. The Club has caused widespread interest among the business and commerce students of the University, and it seems destined to take its place as one of the leading organizations on the campus.

OFFICE OF THE DEAN

Mr. H. G. Wright
Grand Secretary-Treasurer
International Fraternity of Delta Sigma Pi
222 West Adams Street
Chicago, Illinois

Dear Mr. Wright:

I am writing this letter to lend my support to the petition being made by the Professional Business Club to be accepted for a charter by the International Fraternity of Delta Sigma Pi. This local club has been accepted on the campus at Maryland and is a thriving organization. It is well thought of in the College of Business and Public Administration and has attracted some of the best of our men.

I strongly recommend the Professional Business Club of the University of Maryland for favorable consideration.

Sincerely,

Dear Brother Wright:

As the two members of Delta Sigma Pi now on the Campus of the University of Maryland we wish to second and approve the application of the Professional Business Club. This club, while young, has attracted a very fine group of students and we feel will be a creditable addition to the rolls of our fraternity.

This group has already made a strong mark on the local picture. They are participating actively in the work of business education and building those outside business contacts that are of such great importance for the fulfillment of the objectives of our fraternity.

We know most of the men personally and believe that both as a group and individually they are distinctly of Delta Sigma Pi calibre judging from our experience as Faculty Advisers at other Universities.

Fraternally yours

Brothers:

It has been my privilege to visit College Park on several occasions and meet with the members of the Professional Business Club of The University of Maryland. As President of The Baltimore Alumni Club, I heartily endorse their petition for membership in Delta Sigma Pi.

I believe it is only fitting and proper that such a fine group be invested with the task of furthering the traditions of Delta Sigma Pi on the site of the birthplace of Chi Chapter twenty eight years ago.

Fraternally,

C. Davis Hogendorp

Gentlemen:

Chi Chapter has been in a position to observe at first hand the Professional Business Club of the University of Maryland. We were present at its inception and again at a later meeting.

We believe that this club will be a valuable addition to the roster of Delta Sigma Pi. We would be glad to extend a hand of welcome to these men as brothers in our fraternity.

We therefore recommend the Professional Business Club to you, and hope for a favourable response to this petition.

Fraternally
