In pursuit of this affiliation, the members of Gamma Mu Upsilon colony pledge to uphold the rules and regulations as set forth in the constitution and bylaws of the International Fraternity of Delta Sigma Pi and further to carry out its tradition and programs.

Gentlemen:

Several months ago, a former student and teaching assistant of mine, Kathy Carlstrom, stopped by the office to ask if I would be the faculty advisor for a business fraternity being organized on campus. I had never heard of the organization she mentioned, however I agreed because of my high regard for her.

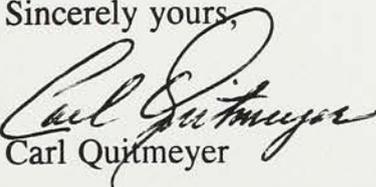

In these intervening months, I have been a frequent observer at the new group's organizational meetings, discussions and social events and have been very impressed by the progress they have made in such a short period of time. The dedication, hard work, organizational skills, teamwork and professionalism they have demonstrated has been outstanding and truly exemplary. Similarly, I was impressed by the helpfulness and professionalism of the Delta Sigma Pi student representatives who came to our campus to assist in this process.

In short, what began for me as a casual accommodation of a student's request has turned into an attitude of admiration and respect, not only for the student members of the local colony but for the Delta Sigma Pi organization as a whole. I am now honored and delighted to be associated both with a campus group that shows the drive that these students have demonstrated and with an organization that can motivate students to achieve what these students have accomplished.

It is my understanding that the Gamma Mu Upsilon colony at George Mason University is petitioning for a charter in the Delta Sigma Pi International Business Fraternity. I recommend your consideration and affirmative response to their request. I am convinced that your organization can have a significant positive influence in molding our student members into successful leaders and professionals. Conversely, I believe our university's chapter, if the requested charter is granted, will contribute to the strength and success of your organization.

If I can be of further assistance in any way, please feel free to contact me or call me at (703) 978-4840.

Sincerely yours,

Carl Quitmeyer

Attn: C. Dean Ferguson / Director

Dear Dean;

I am pleased to be writing this letter today to request the installation of the Gamma Mu Upsilon Colony at George Mason University into our fraternity. I have watched over this group for the past semester and have been quite pleased with their progress. To date they have a membership in excess of 46 and a C.E.I. total of over 10,000 points. I have been impressed with their professionalism and their drive over the last semester.

They have enjoyed the help and support of another chapter in the region, Iota Kappa at James Madison University. I think with this support and direction they have been able to develop quickly and now represent the caliber individuals we expect to become members of our organization. I think it is now time to proceed with the process and accept their petition for membership.

I strongly recommend, based upon their organization as it exists today, that we install the Gamma Mu Upsilon Colony into full brotherhood and charter them as a chapter. If you have any questions or wish further information please do not hesitate to contact me.

Fraternally,

Michael J. Spadaro

Dear Grand Council:

I graduated from George Mason University in January of 1990 with a Bachelor of Science degree in Accounting. Although I enjoyed my four years there, it was often difficult to meet people since the majority of students commute. Most of my friends were met through a sports team, as I chose not to become involved with the social fraternities and sororities. I would have liked to have had the chance to be involved with a fraternity such as Delta Sigma Pi, through which I could have met other students in the same field of study.

I support the idea of establishing a chapter of Delta Sigma Pi at George Mason. This fraternity would provide an excellent opportunity for co-ed business students to meet with each other in academic and social environments. Most of the other clubs and organizations at George Mason segregate students by major or sex. Delta Sigma Pi would allow business students from a variety of majors to gather to share ideas, information, and assistance as they work towards their common goal of entering the business world.

Sincerely,

Laura S. Bruck

Dear Brothers:

My younger sister, Kathy Carlstrom, approached me on her own accord last spring about starting a chapter of Delta Sigma Pi at George Mason University. Since that time she has contributed numerous hours of her time in attempting to achieve her goal of establishing the Gamma Mu Upsilon chapter.

Last August she attended parts of Grand Chapter Congress to increase her understanding of the Fraternity before making a final committment to undertake the difficult task of starting a new chapter. During the fall, with considerable assistance from the Iota Kappa Chapter, she was able to attract over 40 potential brothers to join her in what became their goal. The goal of making the Gamma Mu Upsilon Chapter a reality.

Based on the hard work that she and the other potential brothers have demonstrated and on my personal experiences with her and some of the other potential brothers, I feel that they would only contribute to enhancing the bond of brotherhood which makes the International Fraternity of Delta Sigma Pi such a wonderful experience. I fully support the establishment of the Gamma Mu Upsilon Chapter.

Fraternally yours,

Dear Grand Council:

I graduated from George Mason University with distinction in May of 1987 with a Bachelor of Science in Business Administration with a concentration in Accounting. Upon graduation I was employed by Ernst & Whinney (now Ernst & Young) and passed my C.P.A. exam. I believe the excellent education I received at George Mason University enabled me to meet my career goals.

However, I do regret not having a co-ed business fraternity, like Delta Sigma Pi available to me during my undergraduate years. I return to George Mason periodically as part of the recruiting teams for Ernst & Young and interview accounting students. I believe that the George Mason University business students deserve a professional co-ed fraternity.

Sincerely,

Kimberly A. Kyriazi

Dear Members of the Grand Council:

I am writing on behalf of a group of students at George Mason University who have recently formed the Gamma Mu Upsilon Colony. I wish to support their petition for installation as a chapter of Delta Sigma Pi.

I have witnessed the progression of the group, from basic recruiting and informational gatherings early last semester to well-organized business meetings and a full calendar of events planned for this Spring. I respect their hard work and dedication toward achieving their goal to become a chapter.

My own experiences within the Fraternity had a very positive influence on my life. Affiliating with a group of business students pursuing goals similar to mine helped to make my college experience a memorable one. I learned to communicate and work within a group environment, to prioritize and organize my time, and to take pride in being part of a fraternity committed to professionalism.

I participated in a social function with the colony last semester when they attended a hockey game. I plan to participate in the GMU professional program this semester. I believe this colony is attempting to provide a balanced variety of activities for its members. I feel that these students are pursuing goals in accordance with those of the Fraternity, and I strongly support their petition for chapter status.

To the Executive Committee:

I extend my congratulations to you for taking the initiative to found the Gamma Mu Upsilon Colony of the Delta Sigma Pi Fraternity at George Mason University! May you reap the maximum benefits of your labors!

Thank you for the opportunity to be of service in the early stages of your colony. I believe that last evening's G.M.A.T. diagnostic will be of benefit to all participants in that the forthcoming results will be used as a barometer--a point from which one begins to focus the energies needed to properly prepare for the G.M.A.T. and, indeed, the graduate school admission process.

I look forward to speaking with each of you individually as well as working with the Gamma Mu Upsilon colony in the near future.

Sincerely,

The History of George Mason University

George Mason University's reputation as a competitive educational leader has emerged from a well established tradition of commitment and aspiration. The university had its origin as the Northern Virginia branch of the University of Virginia, named University College. The small institution opened in a renovated elementary school in 1957, with an enrollment of a meager 17 students. The following year, the enthusiastic town (now city) of Fairfax offered their support by purchasing 150 acres of land and donating it to the University of Virginia. As a result of this interest, the University of Virginia Board of Visitors renamed the institution George Mason College to confirm its identity and recognition to the college as a permanent establishment for higher learning.

These events set the stage for an ambitious climb toward continued growth and further interest in education. In 1964, the first campus buildings were constructed. Four unnamed buildings simply identified as the North, West, South and East buildings welcomed 356 students to the up and coming college. In March of 1966, the General Assembly authorized the expansion of George Mason College, allowing it to offer four year degrees as well as granting the college a long range mandate to expand into a regional university. Graduate programs were established by September of 1970, as George Mason expanded physically by acquiring an additional 422 acres and later reaching a total of 583 acres. This led to the construction of the arts and science building in 1971, later named Thompson Hall, and the ground-work for the first student union building in 1972.

With the college's rapid growth and the surrounding community's support and enthusiasm, the University of Virginia Board of Visitors recommended that the college separate from its parent institution. George Mason's goal was realized on April 7, 1972, when the Governor signed the General Assembly legislation that established George Mason University as a separate and independent entity.

Since 1972, the university has developed rapidly, increasing enrollment from 4,166 to 20,308. In 1974, the first tower of the library was opened for public use. In 1975, Robinson Hall was dedicated to Clarence Johnston Robinson. On July 1977, the School of Business Administration was created.

The change in presidency from Dr. Robert C. Krug to Dr. George W. Johnson, in 1978, marked further progression toward becoming a larger scale institution. In the year 1980, Robinson II was completed and the Departments of Economics, Sociology, Philosophy and Religion were established. August of 1980 marked the Accreditation of George Mason University School of Law. Also, the first doctoral programs were offered: a Doctor of Public Administration and a Doctor of Arts in Education. The following year brought the completion of Student Union II, including a dining hall to accommodate the growing number of on-campus students, which had steadily increased to a current 3,000 students. In addition, a George Mason Satellite Campus in Arlington provided off-campus graduate courses for the first time.

September of 1982, brought three more doctoral programs and six graduate degrees, furthering George Mason University's broad ranged curriculum. George Mason took innovative steps in improving education by adopting the PAGE Program (Plan for Alternative General Education) in 1983. In 1984, five departments were established within the School of Business Administration. Also, in 1984, the Robinson Professors, a group of outstanding scholars distinguished by their commitment to undergraduate teaching, joined the faculty. One year later, the Board of Visitors approved the introduction of two new schools, the School of Nursing and the School of Information Technology and Engineering. In 1989, the American Assembly of Collegiate School of Business accredited the George Mason School of Business Administration.

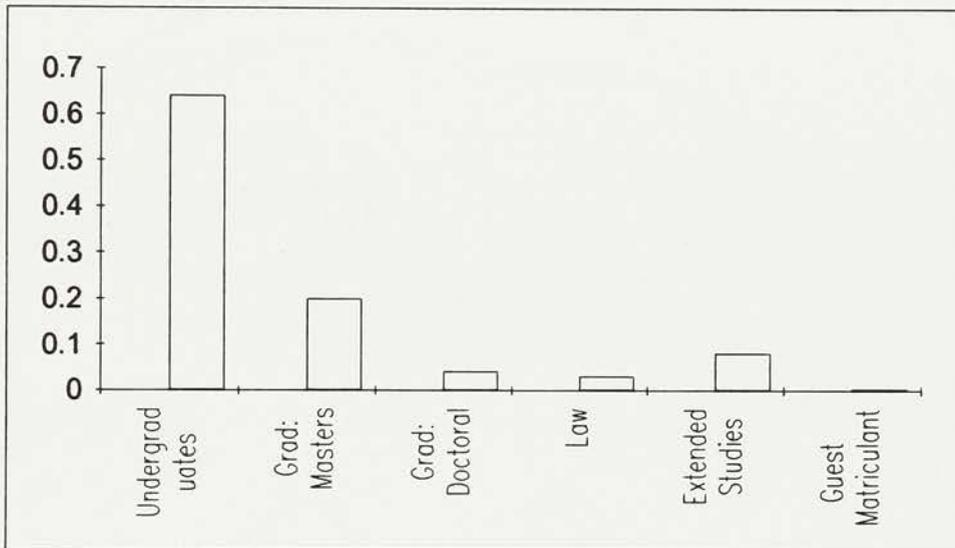

As George Mason established itself in the academic community as a university with a variety of majors and an elite, prestigious faculty, the University achieved national distinction in many areas. On December 20, 1986, George Mason University professor James Buchanan received the Nobel Memorial Prize for Economic Science.

The Arts Center was established in the late 1980's and phase I of the project was completed in 1987. On October 6, 1990, the new Concert Hall was built, attracting orchestral dance and other forms of entertainment to the Fairfax community.

George Mason University has distinguished itself as a provider of traditional as well as innovative education. Its reputation continues to develop as the university offers an educational and cultural resource for all who utilize it.

Fenwick Library

Fenwick Library was named after Charles Rogers Fenwick, a delegate to the Virginia General Assembly from Arlington, on December 15, 1967. It contains over 400,000 volumes, subscribes to over 4000 periodicals and receives 14,000 new volumes each year. It is the tallest building on campus and serves for an excellent study lounge.

Humanities Complex

The Humanities Complex is the largest academic complex in Virginia consisting of Mason Hall, College Hall, Humanities I, Humanities II and the Performing Arts Center. Mason Hall accommodates the majority of our administration staff while College Hall includes offices for the fine arts faculty. Humanities I and Humanities II are mainly for art, music, theatre and dance classrooms. The most impressive of the buildings, the Center for Performing Arts, includes art galleries and courtyards for sculpture exhibits. The Concert Hall built, in early 1990, seats 2,000 and is equivalent to the Kennedy Center in quality of programs.

Krug Hall

Dedicated on November 11, 1964, Krug Hall is one of the four original buildings on George Mason's main campus. It is located in the center of campus and houses the offices of Student Records, Registrar, Cashier, and Extended Studies.

Patriot's Center

The Patriot's Center, a 16 million dollar investment, is the only sports and entertainment arena of its kind in Northern Virginia. It hosts the McDonald's World Cup Gymnastics Championships yearly and is the home court for George Mason's basketball team. The facility seats 10,000 people and the majority of the employees are George Mason University students.

Robinson Hall

Robinson Hall, dedicated on September 24, 1975, was named for Clarence Johnston Robinson, Chairman of George Mason College (now George Mason University) Advisory Board. The building houses the Schools of Business and Nursing, Graduate School of Education, the Economics Department, along with, classrooms, faculty offices and a tutorial center.

Science and Technology Building II

Science and Technology Building II, completed in the spring of 1991, offers many advantages to the students at George Mason University. Being our newest building, it has the highest technological computer systems and engineering equipment available on campus. This building features several computer science, physics and chemistry labs.

Student Union I

Student Union I was built in 1971. It serves as the center for student life and includes the George Mason Bank, a game room, meeting rooms, the offices of Student Union Administration and the Dean of Student Services.

Student Union II

Student Union II, built in 1981, provides George Mason students with cozy study lounges and rooms for organizations to hold meetings. There is a spectacular dining hall to accommodate the residents as well as marketplace which features Pizza Hut pizza. Renovation of the building began in the spring of 1991 and was completed during the summer for the George Mason students to enjoy the expansion to the bookstore, the additional room in the dining hall and the newest place to eat on campus featuring Taco Bell.

The History of the School of Business Administration

The first undergraduate work in business administration was offered in the Department of Social Sciences in 1966. The school had recently established itself as a four year institution. In 1968, the first undergraduate degrees were conferred. The growing student interest in business justified creating the Department of Business Administration in 1971.

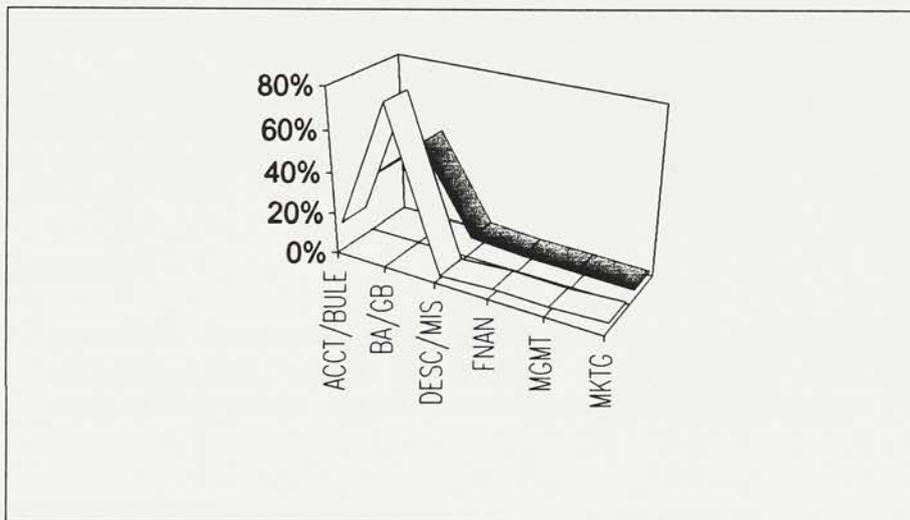

April 7, 1972 marked the expansion of George Mason College. Virginia General Assembly enacted legislation which separates George Mason from its parent institution, University of Virginia. The school was changed to George Mason University. Following George Mason's independence, the first M.B.A. program was started and degrees were awarded in June 1974.

The School of Business Administration was officially established on July 1, 1977. By the fall of 1980, undergraduate degrees with five new undergraduate majors were offered. The majors included Accounting, Decision Sciences, Finance, Management and Marketing, each of them establishing their own department by 1984. In 1989, the American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business accredited the George Mason School of Business Administration.

Currently, the George Mason School of Business Administration, has maintained a strong precedent for high Academic standards. It has established the highest undergraduate admission requirements of any business school in Virginia and has expanded the faculty to seventy three outstanding professors. Further growth and achievements of the School of Business Administration contribute to George Mason's reputation as a competitive and respected institution.

The History of Gamma Mu Upsilon

Kathy Carlstrom, a student at George Mason University, introduced us to Delta Sigma Pi at informational meetings called on October 2 and 3, 1991. Brothers of the Iota Kappa chapter at James Madison University explained how we, as a group, and as individuals, could benefit from being affiliated with Delta Sigma Pi.

Our first business meeting was held on October 10, for all interested business majors. Twenty seven people were in attendance along with Carl Quitmeyer (our colony advisor). During the meeting, officers were formally elected with help from an Iota Kappa chapter representative, Todd Perry. The name Gamma Mu Upsilon was chosen as our colony name for Delta Sigma Pi at George Mason University.

Business meetings were held in the weeks that followed where any interested business students could join. Throughout the semester, Gamma Mu Upsilon held various professional and social activities, fund raisers and community services.

Our first social activity, a bar-b-que, was held on October 11, to recruit new members for the colony and get to know one another. We spent the next weekend at James Madison University establishing new friendships with the brothers of the Iota Kappa chapter through fun-filled activities.

Halloween night brought out the ghosts and goblins. Gamma Mu Upsilon colony along with forty other George Mason University organizations participated in our first community service project: Witch Watch. We patrolled the streets in a Fairfax neighborhood making sure all the children were safe from witches on broomsticks.

On November 11, we celebrated Founder's Day from sunup to sundown, dressed in professional attire. The true beauty of the colony shined forth on this day.

We had our first speaker, Tim Stone, from the Ronkin Educational Group on November 12. He administered practice GMAT exams to prepare us for graduate school. We plan to continue this event in years to come to benefit the upcoming seniors.

Our second community service project was held November 16, at the ACCESS Retirement Home. We helped run a bazaar to raise money for the home. That evening we held a Founder's Day Celebration in order to get to know one another on a personal basis.

We went to the Capital Center on November 22, to watch the Washington Capitals crush the Boston Bruins.

A panel discussion was held in early December with four Delta Sigma Pi alumni from James Madison University. They shared what this business fraternity had done for them throughout their college career and what it has offered them since graduation.

A week later, we concluded with our last business meeting of the semester. Secret Santa's were finally revealed after a month of anticipation. Gamma Mu Upsilon members got into the holiday spirit by bringing non-perishable items for the needy.

After a week of torturous exams we attended a holiday banquet to celebrate months of hard work and to enjoy the newly found friendships through Delta Sigma Pi. Carl Quitmeyer enhanced our evening with a valuable speech.

The social activities continued throughout winter break as members met to go bowling and ice skating. We were all eagerly awaiting our pledging activities for the forthcoming semester.
